DUBLIN, [illegible]

EARLY [illegible] morning died of a fever, at his lodgings [illegible] after four days illness, [illegible] universally [illegible] the hon. Sir Peter Warren, [illegible] knight of the Bath, and member in the British parliament for the city of Westminster. By his death his country has lost a true patriot, his king a brave and [illegible] the navy a succesful commander; his family the fondest husband and parent; and his relations the sincerest friend. [illegible] him to the rank he so deservedly enjoyed, and his vigilance and conduct in the defence of his country and protection of its trade, gained him the love and esteem of all degrees of people, at the same time that it loaded him with immense wealth, in the [illegible] of his enemies. His death may be said to be a very great loss to his native country, as he intended to lay out the greatest part of his fortune in purchases in this kingdom, a very large one being lately agreed on, and ready for signing, which his unexpected death has prevented. He was descended from a very ancient and worthy family, was a most agreeable companion, and his acts of generosity were as extensive as his power of doing good, of which there are many recent instances. He has left issue three daughters.

London, Au[illegible] Some private letters from Constantinople advise, that a very learned person, vested with a [illegible] character there, has lately purchased a very antient manuscript of the new testament in syriack, to which two epistles of St. Clement are annexed; whence it is esteemed highly valuable.

By advices from Paris we find, that the court has resolved [illegible] the harbour of Rochel, and to defend the entrance [illegible] by the new works: Upwards of 2000 men have already been [illegible] about it, and the court has appropriated four millions of livres to this work. They continue building men of war in that port with all possible diligence, and were just going to launch two new ships of 70 guns each. By the same advices we learn, that the British and French commissaries at Paris make no progress in their business, because the latter still demands impossibilities, i. e. the restitution of [illegible] ships taken by the English during the Spanish war, before the declaration of war between Great Britain and France.

A considerable number of [illegible] are ordered to be added to those already at work on the Royal Anne, now building at Woolwich, in order to finish her as soon as possible.

Yesterday vessels were contracted for to carry naval stores for Antigua and Jamaica.

Letters by the last French mail, intimate, that the provinces in the south of France are not a little distressed by the want of bread, and the loss of many thousand industrious natives [illegible] notwithstanding the cordons of troops posted in order to prevent it. They also insinuate, that by several orders issued for marching forces on that side, the rumour that some thousands of peasants, rendered desperate through an [illegible] neighbourhood of [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] who have sold themselves for four years to a Captain bound to Philadelphia, were carried from the bolt and tun in Fleet-street, and put on board a lighter at Black-Friars, in order to be shipp'd for that colony.

London, August 22. The Apollo, Captain [illegible], lies ready at Cowes to take on board Governor Tinker, who intends to embark in a few days for his government.

London, August 25. Several more men of war will soon be put into commission, and others in commission are ordered to be got ready for sea with all expedition.

Last week arrived the rev. Mr. George Whitefield from a Circuit through South Wales, Bristol, and Gloucester[illegible] where he has been preaching to very numerous con[illegible] ons; and yesterday morning set out for Scotland.
